conflict and group boundaries hostility and tensions in conflict relationship in group conflict and group structure conflict with out group and group structure ideology and conflict conflict calls for allies

after a low threshold introduction this book offers an orientation on various theories of social conflict and their potential for understanding conflicts in order to be able to deal with them constructively classic theories of social conflict are presented briefly first based on this two selected theoretical perspectives on social conflict the conflict theory approaches of ralf dahrendorf and niklas luhmann are further developed dahrendorf s conflict theory is combined with a differentiated variant of his life chances approach Luhmann's conflict theory is expanded to include a theoretical discussion of escalation dynamics and de-escalation archetypes using a case study on landscape conflicts in the context of the energy transition. The authors illustrate the potential of the theories discussed to explain the emergence, stabilization, and escalation of such conflicts. The book will end with a focus on current discussions about the significance of feelings in social conflicts and how to deal with them.

This book examines conflict as a normal and recurrent feature of primate social life, emphasizing that the study of aggression and social conflict is important to understanding the basic processes that contribute to social order. The authors go well beyond the usual view which tends to equate social conflict with fights over food mates or social supremacy and analyze the diverse manifestations and significance of conflict in a variety of case studies. Contributors are scientists with field and laboratory experience in anthropology, behavioral endocrinology, ethology, and psychology, utilizing the growing body of research on life span development in primatology. The authors offer more extensive analyses of the complexity of primate social relationships.

Intergroup competition and conflict create pervasive problems in human society, giving rise to such phenomena as prejudice, terrorism, ethnic cleansing, and interstate war. Citizens, policy makers, social workers, schoolteachers, and politicians wrestle with these problems, and with difficult questions these issues pose: what causes conflict to escalate? How should we manage conflict within communities and also in society at large? Is conflict always bad, or does it have other, more beneficial consequences? Social conflict within and between groups provides an overview of contemporary research from the social sciences on these questions. It brings together the research output of a number of leading researchers in psychology, management, and economics, sociology, and political science and draws on the outcomes of ten prominent research programs conducted over the past five years. The chapters cover a range of fascinating topics, including prejudice and discrimination in multi-ethnic societies and conflict and negotiation in the field of industrial relations. The authors also consider the possibilities for intervention at the interpersonal, intergroup, and societal level. This is the first volume to provide an interdisciplinary overview of the various scientific approaches to studying the origins and consequences of social conflict. It will be of great interest to researchers, graduates, and upper-level undergraduate students from across the social and behavioural sciences.

Social conflict has been the standard bearer for brief, sophisticated coverage of all the key research on social conflict and its resolution from a psychological perspective. Dealing with interpersonal, intergroup, interorganizational, and international conflict, the new edition is thoroughly updated and offers additional content to address recent findings and world events.
