the first twenty years of post cold war us defense and diplomatic policies toward asia have looked a good deal like the previous 50 namely continued deterrence based upon overwhelming offensive military predominance in east asia all powers harbor common and divergent interests based on fragmented nationalist identities and complex economic interdependence in this multipolar asian system new chinese military capabilities could support both the wish to secure its own interests as well as a more expansive vision for regional leadership which might harbor a destabilizing geopolitical agenda how the united states addresses this reality via military procurements and employment concepts for the asian theater could either detract from or enhance crisis stability the us defense establishment must reorient its force posture to save money manage conflicts of interest and prevent future interstate crises this analysis provides a framework for how the united states should ideally structure and use military power so as to best support the diplomatic resolution of conflicting interests without resorting to full scale warfare it also critiques the usual western military focus on offensive strategic predominance in force postures itself often fuelled by the unrealistic pursuit of the opponent s complete submission via victory in decisive battles since the earliest days of warfare military operations have followed a predictable formula after a decisive battle an army must pursue the enemy and destroy its organization in order to achieve a victorious campaign but by the mid 19th century the emergence of massive armies and advanced weaponry and the concomitant decline in the effectiveness of cavalry had diminished the practicality of pursuit producing campaigns that bogged down short of decisive victory great battles had become curiously indecisive decisive campaigns virtually impossible includes accounts of civilians roles and experiences through wars in twentieth century europe this second volume covers key events from the french revolution to the american bicentennial it chronicles the discoveries battles inventions political movements treaties elections births assassinations coups and coronations that have shaped our modern world this global analysis of the social effects of war offers a far reaching assessment of military history challenging the focus on technology and military revolution war is placed in context from the evolution of specialized troops in the earliest civilizations to likely future scenarios this book offers a unique combination of maps and illustrations with detailed chronological summary working from a global standpoint the authors look at the main cultural scientific religious and political events since the french revolution
