in this text we focus on criminal behavior and antisocial behavior because antisocial behavior is not always criminal from a psychological perspective more specifically adults and juveniles who violate the law or who act antisocially are portrayed as embedded in and continually influenced by multiple systems within the psychosocial environment meaningful theory well executed research and skillful application of knowledge to the crime problem require an understanding of the many levels of events that influence a person's life course from the individual to the individual's family peers schools neighborhoods community culture and society as a whole causal explanations are essential for theory building in focusing on causal mechanisms rather than descriptive effects the goal of this volume is to increase our theoretical understanding of the way gender operates in interaction theoretical analyses of gender's effects in interaction in turn are necessary to understand how such effects might be implicated with individual level and social structural level processes in the larger system of gender inequality despite other differences the contributors to this book all take what might be loosely called a microstructural approach to gender and interaction all agree that individuals come to interaction with certain common socially created beliefs cultural meanings experiences and social rules these include stereotypes about gendered activities and skills beliefs about the status value of gender rules for interacting in certain settings and so on however as individuals apply these beliefs and rules to the specific contingent events of interaction they combine and reshape their implications in distinctive ways that are particular to the encounter as a result individuals actively construct their social relations in the encounter through their interaction the patterns of relations that develop are not completely determined or scripted in advance by the beliefs and rules of the larger society consequently there is a reciprocal causal relationship between constructed patterns of interaction and larger social structural forms the constructed patterns of social relations among a set of interactants can be thought of as micro level social structures or more simply microstructures

in the aftermath of martinson s 1974 nothing works doctrine scholars have made a concerted effort to develop an evidence based corrections theory and practice to show what works to change offenders perhaps the most important contribution to this effort was made by a group of canadian psychologists most notably donald andrews james bonta and paul gendreau who developed a treatment paradigm called the risk need responsivity rnr model which became the dominant theory of correctional treatment this approach was more recently challenged by a perspective developed by tony ward shadd maruna and others called the good lives model glm based in part on desistance research and positive psychology this model proposes to rehabilitate offenders by building on the strengths offenders possess glm proponents see the rnr model as a deficit model that fixes dynamic risk factors rather than identifying what offenders value most and using these positive factors to pull them out of crime through a detailed examination of both models theoretical and correctional frameworks the future of correctional rehabilitation moving beyond the rnr model and good lives model debate probes the extent to which the models offer incompatible or compatible approaches to offender treatment and suggests how to integrate the rnr and glm approaches to build a new and hopefully more effective vision for offender treatment a foreword by renowned criminologist francis t cullen helps put the material into context this book will be of much interest to scholars and students studying correctional rehabilitation as well as practitioners working with offenders
