are judges decisions more likely to be based on personal inclinations or legal authority the answer eileen braman argues is both law politics and perception brings cognitive psychology to bear on the question of the relative importance of norms of legal reasoning versus decision markers policy preferences in legal decision making while braman acknowledges that decision makers attitudes or more precisely their preference for policy outcomes can play a significant role in judicial decisions she also believes that decision makers belief that they must abide by accepted rules of legal analysis significantly limits the role of preferences in their judgements to reconcile these competing factors braman posits that judges engage in motivated reasoning a biased process in which decision makers are unconsciously predisposed to find legal authority that is consistent with their own preferences more convincing than those that go against them but braman also provides evidence that the scope of motivated reasoning is limited objective case facts and accepted norms of legal reasoning can often inhibit decision makers ability to reach conclusions consistent with their preferences a great deal has been written on the relationship between politics and law legislation as a source of law is often highly political and is the product of a process or the creation of officials often closely bound into party politics legislation is also one of the exclusive powers of the state as such legislation is plainly both practical and inevitably political at the same time most understandings of the relationship between law and politics have been overwhelmingly theoretical in this light public law is often seen as part of the political order or as inescapably partisan we know relatively little about the real impact of law on politicians through their legal advisers and civil servants how do lawyers in government see their roles and what use do they make of law how does politics actually affect the drafting of legislation or the making of policy this volume will begin to answer these and other questions about the practical day to day relationship between law and politics in a number of settings it includes chapters by former departmental legal advisers drafters of legislation law reformers judges and academics who focus on what actually happens when law meets politics in government this volume derives from a series of lectures delivered as the general course at the hague academy of international law in july 1989 like those lectures this volume does not pretend to provide a complete treatise covering all international law rather it offers a particular perspective on the principal subjects of traditional international law elaborates new developments and dares reexamine assumptions and premises the book is built on three themes the first addresses law as politics and international law as the law of a political system now comprised of more than 180 separate independent states the essential autonomy of states accounts for the political as well as economic and cultural heterogeneity in a pluralist and fragmented system and international law as its common denominator of normative expression a second theme explores change in international law as reflecting change in the values and purposes of the international political system it traces the pursuit through law of the traditional ideal of the state system to secure every state s right to realize its own agenda through its own institutions and the superimposed contemporary purpose to promote individual human rights and welfare in every society the third theme perceives a movement in the law from conceptualism to functionalism from logical deduction out of abstract principles to pragmatic attention to practical needs and solutions to new and old human problems each of these themes dominates in several chapters but the other themes are not absent from any of them each will add a fresh perspective and contribute to understanding the nature and operation of international law in the international political system at the turn of a new century this book offers a radical new understanding of law beyond the confines of its formalization by the state the book takes off from the late work of gilles deleuze and michel foucault for whom law and its institutions came to be liberated from an ideological perspective that had treated them as sterile instruments for the reproduction of domination engaging its continental history it addresses the concept of law not merely as a command but as the result of a much more complex legal operation aimed at dynamically stabilizing the social relations of a community the book thus sidesteps the usual legal political focus on those from hobbes to schmitt who have contributed to the categorical scheme of the modern state and with it questions of political representation sovereignty the rigid distinction between public law and private law and so on as it pursues an alternative theoretical trajectory through ravaisson tarde and hauriou politics the book maintains can no longer be treated simply through the state form and relatedly the law must be seen as a living law a law that cannot be treated exclusively in formal terms but must be taken as a grammar capable of articulating a politics of process relationality and innovation reconceived as such law can then circumvent the aporias that arise when society is viewed as a private company and the state seen as the bearer of the only possible means of formalizing its relationships at the intersection of law and political theory this book will speak to scholars and others with interests in both these areas and especially those concerned with the limits of both conventional and critical approaches to law
